

Brooklyn Sills

December 12, 2023

Brooklyn was the best dog I've ever had. He was always there by my side through so many things. After we faced loss in a house fire in 2010, he grew skittish of loud noises, but never failed to keep his younger siblings, dachshunds Phoenix and Ranger, in line as best he could. He was quirky, but as my dog I expected no less. He was a dork who would always be up for a challenge, and loved destroying any toy that came his way. He even played so lovingly with the only other survivor of the house fire, our elderly small tortoiseshell cat named Stormy, letting her bat away at his face as he held his mouth open to pretend to attack her. This photo is at Red Feather Lakes back home. I wish I had done more wilderness walks with him, but I know we will have many walks when I meet him again. I will always love you, Brook, you were the biggest and best Boston anyone could ever have. Thank you, Pet Memories, for taking such good care of him.
