

Kyle Søren Nielsen

February 28, 2015 - March 31, 2024

Kyle Søren Nielsen, the sweetest, most tender-hearted boy, was born on February 28, 2015 and died on March 31, 2024. We were fortunate to have seven beautiful years with him, each of which brought us immeasurable joy and love. Our world is shattered without him; the absence of his loving, playful presence, the way he would curl up and snuggle with me at night, his silly rolling game and half-twist on the floor during playtime, his happy, wagging tail and beautiful brown eyes, is overwhelming. Kyle had recently been diagnosed with late-stage kidney disease/failure, and although a blood transfusion helped his anemia, his kidneys were shutting down fast, which severely impacted his quality of life, including his ability to eat. Consequently, we had to make the heartbreaking decision to say goodbye, which was one of the most difficult decisions that our family has ever faced. We have lost our sweet boy, our little Rascal, our Buddy, whose light, love, and goodness made our lives so full. Thank you for the gift that you were, Kyle Søren Nielsen, and the many ways that you expanded our ability to feel, to play, to love, and to be attentively present with one another for no other reason than to just “be-there-fully-together.” We miss you so much, sweet Buddy, and will never forget you. We love you, Kyle Søren Nielsen, the sweetest, most tender-hearted boy, with the most beautiful brown eyes, and the waggin’est tail.

“ Kyle was a feisty little guy with a unique personality, which made him all the more lovable. When I'd come over, he'd follow me around until I stopped. Then he'd roll over on his back for a tummy rub! So cute! You couldn't turn him down. Yes, Boy, you are missed and will forever remain in our hearts.
Love, Nana

“ The present has become more precious to me. That is Kyle's gift.

I miss the sassy little way he'd walk with his tail sticking up in the air. I miss the way he'd always be there to say hello at the door to the garage when I came home. I miss waking up to him curled up next to me at night, keeping each other warm. I miss petting his perfectly spherical head. I miss the way he'd always want to smell the smelly things : my feet, armpits, beer-breath, freshly brushed teeth. I miss the way he'd try to roll over like Sophie, his sister, but get "stuck" halfway around and couldn't ever seem to gracefully flip his hips with his shoulders. I miss the way he'd play with his sisters, Lizzy and Sophie, and care for them.

He was a calming element for our home as well. Always, calm, cool, and collected, mostly. He would get all caught up in barking at people in the street through the front window because his sisters were prone to bark. He'd keep barking even after they'd stopped acting fierce never really convincing anyone that he was a barker in the first place--always supporting the pack. He was fierce though, certainly in the way he loved all of us. I will miss you always, Kyle Søren.

Thank you for adding so much to my life and giving this gift of being more present to me. The present is so temporary, constantly flowing into rivers of the past. Keeping myself in the present, taking moments to make sure I'm here with those around me, is something you did well and modeled for me. Thank you--forever.

*Love,
Dad*
