

Tsuki Rich

July 2, 2009 - March 28, 2025

A most excellent and loving void.

But what is grief, if not love persevering...

We love all our voids (yes, even Gingers). But if we're lucky enough to share part of our life with a truly special one, we are the better for it. Tsuki (7/2/2009-3/28/2025) was my heart and soul. He passed unexpectedly and I'm still waiting for him to hop on my bed, purring like a muscle car. When I am sick or sad he'd stay with me in his very chill and loving way. He was found alone trying to eat food from a store's dumpster. Too young to eat, no mother to feed, he was rescued by a group (New Beginnings Cat Rescue), fostered in a home with loving people. It was love at first site. Our birth year (last digit) was the same. He would've been 16 this July and I 56. I'd give everything for one more moment with him, especially his killer head-butts.

I have his ashes, a paw print & some clippings of his fur. It hurts my heart knowing he moved on to be with his other "Horde-mates" And those broken parts of me will heal over time. But I won't heal via scar tissue. All these broken parts will be held together by his "voidness" or "Kit-sugi," better yet his "Kit-Tsuki." He was a most excellent Gato.
